the white sheets, threadbare and sterile, hold me in the absence of mother's arms and cocoon me in the midst of peril

we waited for hours in crowded lines, to hear our doctor's indifferent sigh, the nighttime crying keeps me up sometimes our numbers stack out of empty wards, the visitor logs are full of vacancies, hidden, lest they be called untoward

I have value, my body has value we kick and scream and beg stuck in sheets poorer than you please don't pull on my last thread
